TOP 3 THINGS I DID THIS WEEK

- ☐ Facilitated a collaborative storytelling session using children's own cultural symbols
- ☐ Updated compliance documentation and supported a new educator through induction
- ☐ Co-designed a modular Halloween reflection tool with symbolic prompts for literacy

THIS WEEK I FELT

NEXT WEEK I WANT TO

Prototype the new sticker sheet for our wellbeing planner.

Trial the new voice bubble cards during morning meetings.

I also want to revisit our nutrition guide and adapt it for the upcoming celebrations.

WHAT WAS THE BEST THING ABOUT THE WEEK?

Seeing the Halloween reflection tool in action—children used symbolic stickers to express their week, and one child said, "This sticker means I was brave when I tried the loud tunnel." It affirmed the power of emotionally intelligent design.

MOST REWARDING INTERACTION I HAD THIS WEEK

A child shared a drawing of their "dream snack" after our fusion food discussion. They described it as "a rainbow pancake with crunchy stars." We turned it into a group art piece and added it to our snack wall. Their pride was contagious.

THINGS I NEED TO CHANGE FOR NEXT WEEK?

Build in more quiet time for myself between documentation tasks. I also want to streamline the compliance checklist so it feels less overwhelming for new staff.
