

Christmas In Mexico

In Mexico, the coming of the Christmas season is announced by the blooming of the Flor de Nochebuena (poinsettia). According to legend, a poor peasant girl was going to church on Noche Buena (Christmas Eve). She was very sad because she didn't have a gift to present to baby Jesus, so she gathered a few weeds on her way.