

Penguins are known for wadding their feet when they walk, and they also slide on their bellies across the snow. Both of these help them move while saving their energy.